Howdo!

So the Reverb collective and I have started planning a composition which will end up as a remix. We are producing a song structure around a song that was originally composed in 1959 as the soundtrack for a film called 'Theme for A Summer Place'.

The music itself would be classified in the genre of 'Easy Listening'. Anna (the group's music leader) became inspired just before Christmas as one of our group brought in a turntable. He brought in a vinyl LP with some Harpsichord-themed easy listening. I couldn't stop laughing!

Anna has developed this idea by getting the group to produce a 'tongue in cheek' inspired remix complete with satirical lyrics!

This week there were only a few people in so we decided to take some time to concentrate on some lyrics and try to structure the actual song. We had such a laugh. It was a good bonding session for me with the group. I had been feeling a little bit like I wasn't doing enough to be beneficial to the group. In the session however, I really enjoyed being silly and laughing with them.

Today we decided to combine the music, structure and lyrics together. Everyone stayed really focused which was a sign they were enjoying themselves. One guy from our group is a budding lyricist and wrote some new lyrics to the second/darker part of our song. We managed to play the song through a few times which, really helped to get it together. I'm aiming to speak to my college as one or two of our guys would really benefit from taking a short course at the college in Logic.
