

Project Crossovers Apprentice's blog

23/09/2014

So! Summer break is over. The jam has been and gone, the reverb performance went very well except we couldn't see anything!

We've started a new song and I decided to take a studio recording of it. So I began organising and taking notes of everyone's jobs. I haven't chosen an exact date yet because I still need to learn how to recording studio works here. After our reverb session, I spend time in the studio with Simon examining how everything operates. This is quite exciting for me as it gives me a chance to demonstrate the skills I've learnt at Uni.

30/09/2014

Hey hey hey! I'm beginning to organise the recording I'm doing for reverb. I plan to get a couple of recruits in from my Uni class to assist me.

I think we may well need to record the piano part first. So I'm going to ask one of our Reverb guys to come in early to lay down some chords. This will be the foundation for the track & has to be recorded in the live room. The tracks following that can easily be layered onto the whole recording...

I will then go and mix the recording into a piece of music

My plan is once I've done this to create a collection of recordings for all of the members to have as a souvenir.

I'm meeting with Karl after the session to discuss some plans for me to purchase some technical equipment. The plan is for me to be able to use this equipment for future work at college and PMZ combined...

SHOW YOUR SUPPORT FOR
MUSIC MAKING A DIFFERENCE
www.plymouthmusiczone.org.uk

