Event Date: Fri 23 June 3.45-6.45pm
(Whitleigh Primary School – 01752 706383)

If you go into the woods today you're in for a big...6ft white rabbit welcoming the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress to a 50th anniversary outdoor extravaganza...

Hundreds of parents and children will be celebrating half a century of Whitleigh Primary School with a cake as big as a basketball court.

And that's just one of the many spectacles lined up for the Creative Arts Performance Festival being held to mark the special birthday. Many of the participants will be dressed to impress and Whitleigh Primary's headteacher won't be the only one hopping around in bunny costume...

Project organiser, Wendy Trevarthen will have her furry ears at the ready too. She says:

"I must have bought every pair of bunny ears in Plymouth! But this Into the Woods event is so much fun because it allows children to celebrate in different ways by allowing them to dress up and perform in the great outdoors and get healthy at the same time. We really wanted to use creative arts in the woodland area between Southway and Whitleigh to bring families together in a unique way."

Ian Smith from the Southway Mature Arts Group (SMART) says:

"The arts are such a wonderful way to bring communities together. Our Southway group is actually the longest running arts group in Plymouth and we're really excited about passing on our experience to the Whitleigh community so we can work together in the future to do more exciting joint projects."

The free Into the Woods event was made possible by a £5000 grant from Awards For All. It's a partnership project between Whitleigh Campus, the Woodland Trust, Plymouth Music Zone, Space for Sport and Arts, the SMART group and the Southway Skiffle Group.

The Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress open the event with a giant dancing cake and balloons at 3.45pm...
